Architectural

Using a mastery of space and material elements, Projex creates coherent elegant, and functional architectural designs.

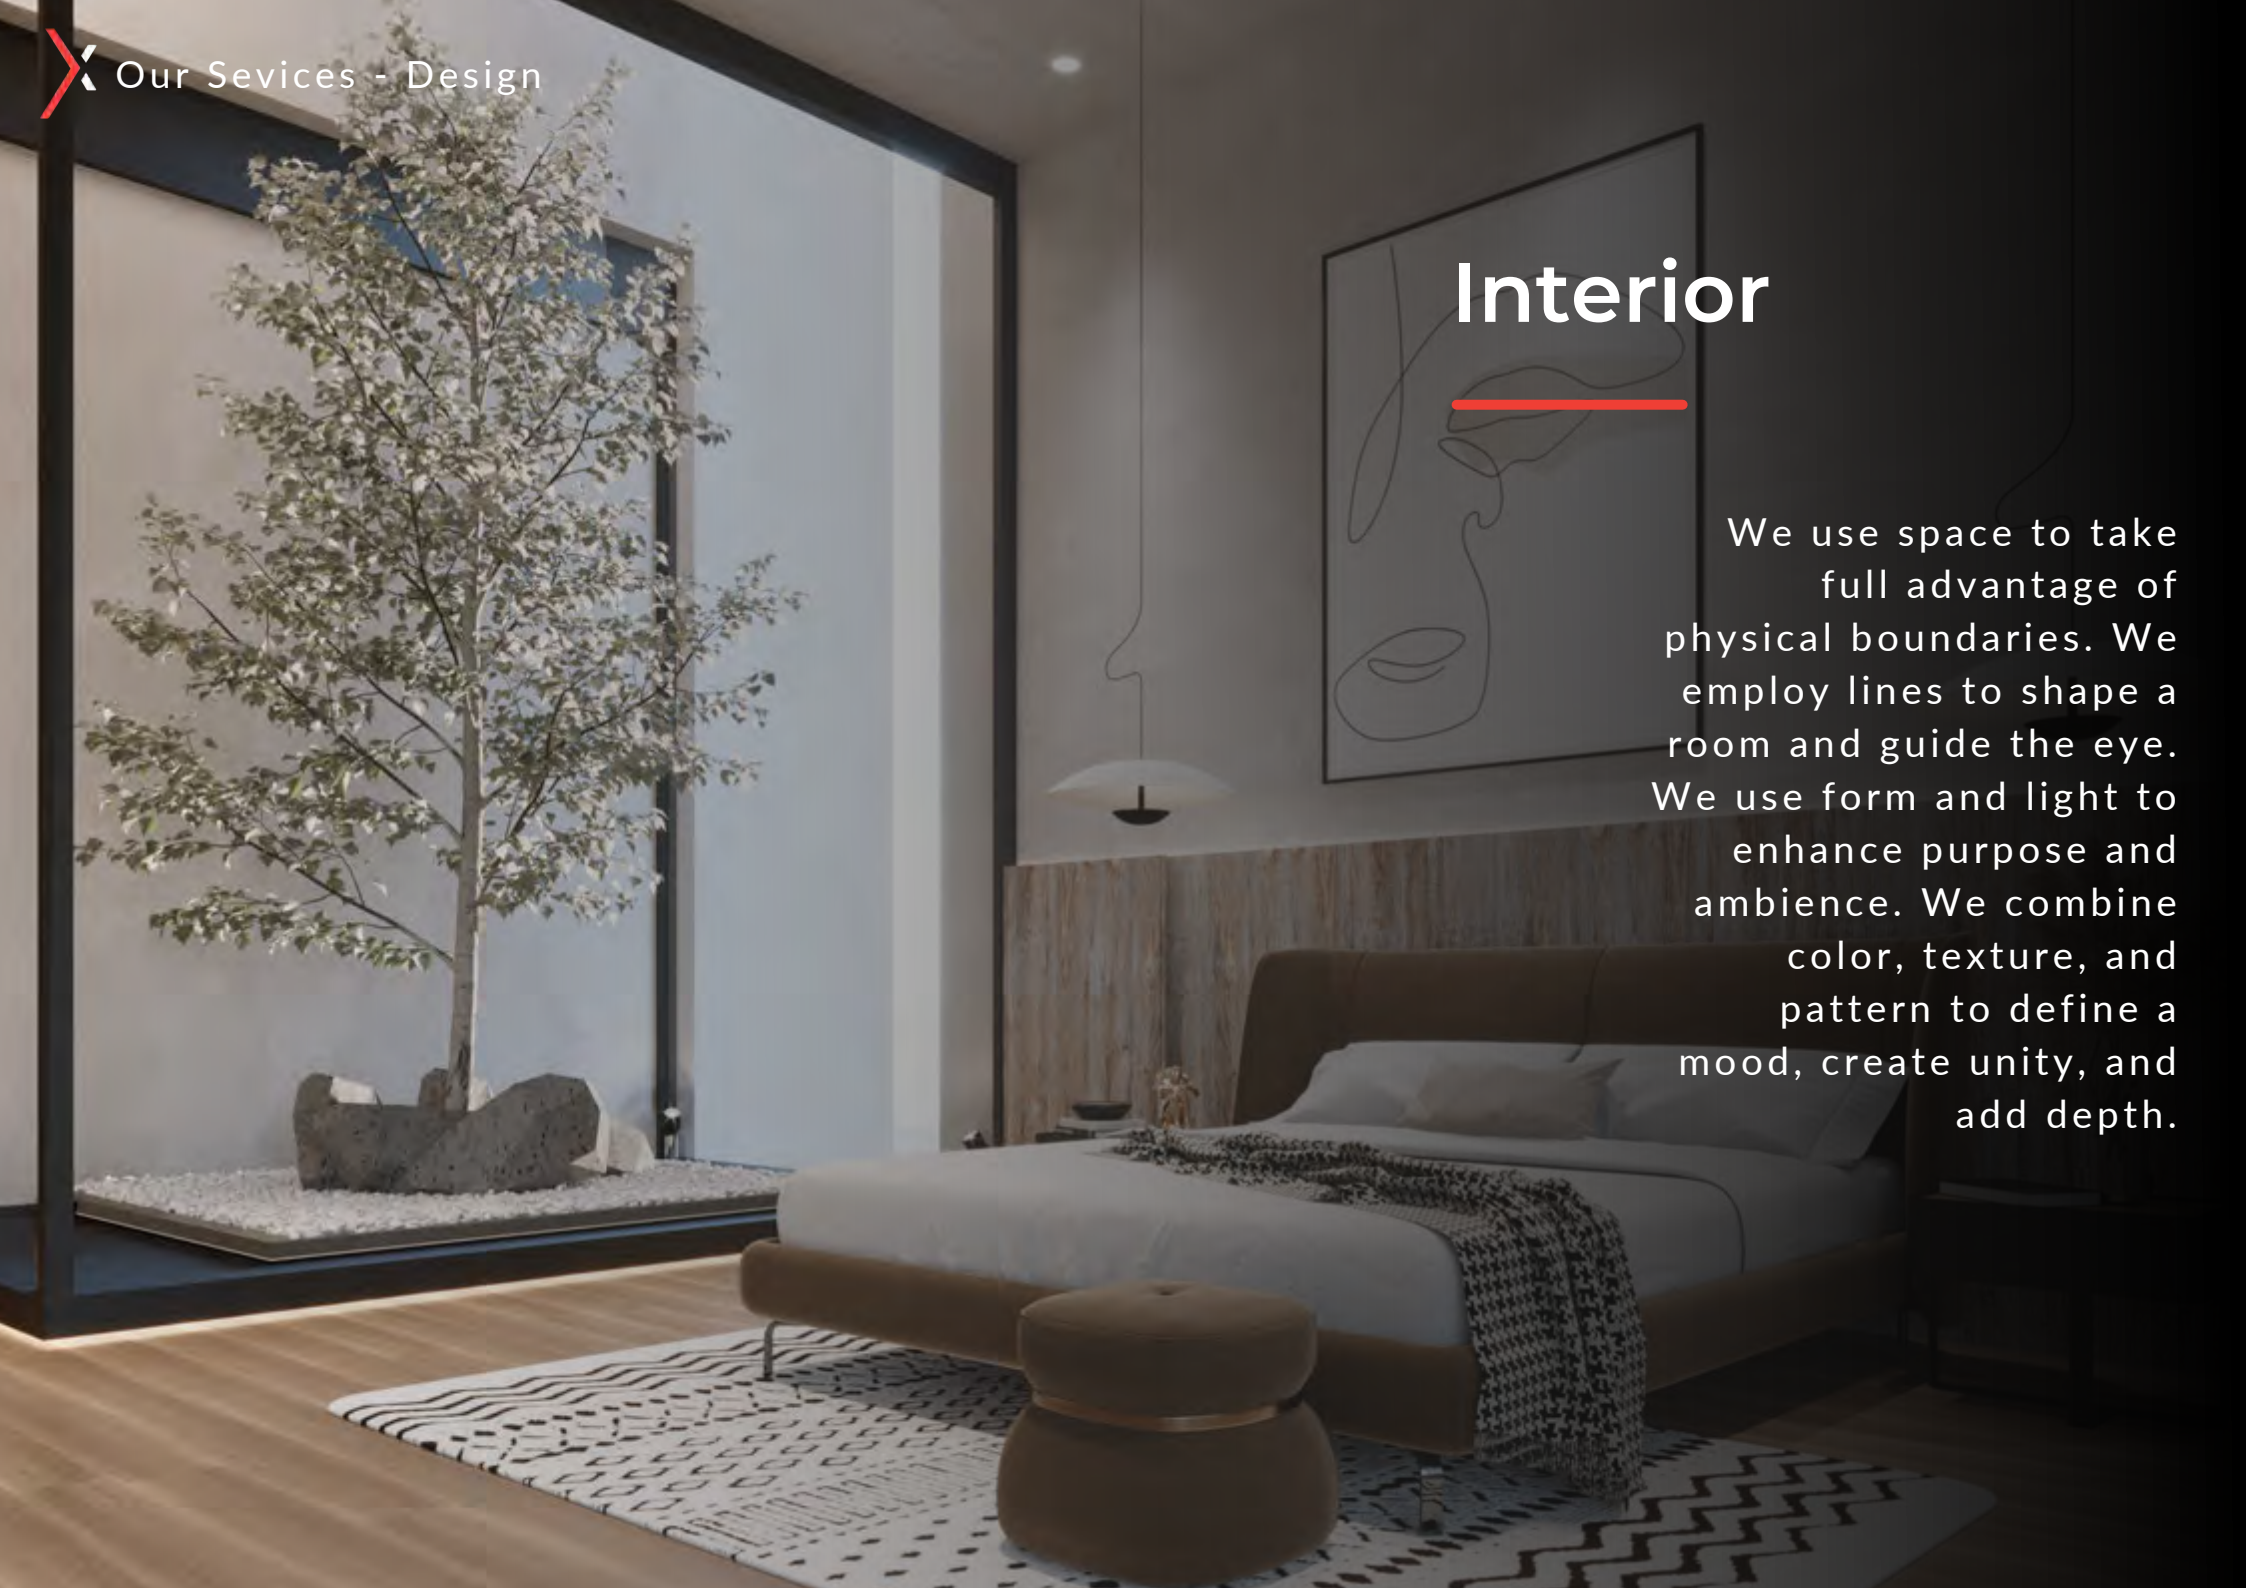

From the stages of strategic definition to handover and closeout, we relentlessly pour our effort and resources into architectural design to ensure the project is accessible, cost-effective, operational, secure, sustainable, productive, and aesthetically pleasing.

Interior

We use space to take full advantage of physical boundaries. We employ lines to shape a room and guide the eye. We use form and light to enhance purpose and ambience. We combine color, texture, and pattern to define a mood, create unity, and add depth.

Landscape

By carefully combining nature, culture, and scope, Projex will help you achieve efficiency and charm through the art of landscape design. Our vast experience in this area gives us the knowledge and skill to enhance every aspect of your landscape. Through the use of lines, we strive to carry the eye and create flow and connectivity. Through mass, we seek to create symmetry. Through form we aim to evoke emotion and create ambience.

Designed by Lorinc Csernyus, a student of the famous Hungarian architect, Imre Makovecz, the pavilion will occupy a space of 1,828 sqm.

Hungary's Pavilion in the mobility district will be in the Makovecz style. Using "dry technology", the multiple-story construction with internal dome and outer casing will be built using no concrete, reinforced concrete, cement, or any technologies that require water.
